Professional Experience

Joseph Szlavik served at the White House during the first Bush Administration as a policy analyst in the Office of Policy Development and as liaison with the Office of Cabinet Affairs and the Office of Legislative Affairs, where he developed an intimate knowledge of the inner workings of the Congress and the various departments of the Executive Branch. Subsequently, Joseph took a position as special assistant in the Office of Enforcement at the U.S. Customs Service.

Joseph left government service to take a position at the States News Service business bureau, working closely with the Securities and Exchange Commission, following mergers and acquisitions, later joining a Washington-based international consulting firm.

By 1992, Joseph had established his own company, now known as Scribe Strategies & Advisors, which now counts business, government, and non-profit clients on four continents.

Educated at the Catholic University of America, Valley Forge Military College, and the American University, Joseph is a member of the National Faculty of the United States Sports Academy and of the board of directors of Save the Speaker's House, Inc., which is preserving the home of Frederick Muhlenberg, the first Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Joseph speaks fluent Spanish, French, and Hungarian.

Joseph is the Vice President of Spear International Commercial Services, a Miami based defense contracting firm and partner company to Redwood Global
